Unique Among Religions

27th week in the series Sent: Living the Mission of the Church

Christianity is one of many religions practiced around the world today. Some claim that all of these religions are essentially the same. Is that true? By comparing Christianity to the other major world religions, we will see that Christianity is indeed unique among religions and that this uniqueness gives us reason for great hope.

Discussion Questions:

- 1) Has anyone ever said to you: "All religions are the same"? How did you respond?
- 2) How does the Christian doctrine of judgment provide more hope than the Hindu concept of karma?
- 3) Buddhism teaches that happiness is found in getting rid of all desire. How have you found happiness and joy in your relationship with God? What role does desire play in that?
- 4) The primary motivation for Muslims devotion to Allah is fear of punishment and Hell. How is Christianity both similar to and different than this?
- 5) What are some practical ways that we can try to share our faith with people from other religions?
