A World Without Anger

Fifth week in the series: Blessed Are

Matthew 5:21-26

In the first of six similar statements, Jesus illustrates how living in the kingdom of the heavens results in a transformed heart rather than simply changed behavior. He begins with the issue of anger, explaining its deeper roots and suggesting a path forward. His words give us a roadmap for living as kingdom-dwellers and dealing with our anger and that of others.

Discussion Questions:

1. What are some of the ways you'd like to see your own heart transformed?
2. What kinds of things make you angry?
3. How do you see contempt at the root of your anger?
4. When was the last time you sat down with someone to reconcile differences? How did it go?
5. Have you experienced personal interaction with another person diminishing contempt in your life?
